The History behind the Roundhouse

This property was the site for two locomotive roundhouses constructed by the Southern Pacific Railroad which first stood between the years of 1911-1925. In 1925, an earthquake severely damaged the roundhouse. The Community Arts Association convinced the railroad to design a new building utilizing the Spanish style influence of the Santa Barbara area. From 1926-1961 the roundhouse and engine turntable serviced the Southern Pacific steam locomotives. In 1982 the roundhouse was dismantled, to make way for The Fess Parker Resort, but the ground floor plaza was left intact to symbolize the historic roundhouse.
